While tight schedules and tight presentations might be considered standard components of a legal career, performing in public while wearing tights is not typically part of life for most attorneys. Some lawyers, though, who recently staged “Night Court 2005: Legal Superheroes” actually donned tights, as well as boots and capes, while raising money for charity. Cartoon-inspired costuming was one element of the amalgam of effort that resulted in the most successful Night Court production in its 15-year history.

Night Court is an annual all-lawyer musical comedy sponsored by the Houston Bar Association that brings together attorneys from across the legal spectrum for performances of parody each summer. Shows satirize current events, celebrities, and entertainment genres, as well as the legal profession. Taking the stage this year from June 15-18, more than 60 Houston-area attorneys danced, sang and super-spoofed in front of packed houses at the Hobby Center’s Zilkha Hall. The 2005 version of the
